Editors' Note

This international seminar on Language Maintenance and Shift II is a continuation of the previous international seminar with the same theme conducted by the Master Program in Linguistics, Diponegoro University in July 2011. We do hope that the seminar with this theme can become a yearly program of the Master Program in Linguistics, Diponegoro University, as we see that this topic still needs our serious attention due to the inevitable impact of globalization on the life of indigenous languages.

We would like to thank the seminar committee for putting together the seminar that gave rise to this collection of papers. Thanks also go to the head and secretary of the Master Program in Linguistics Diponegoro University, without whom the seminar would not have been possible.

The table of contents lists all the papers presented at the seminar. The first five papers are those presented by invited keynote speakers. They are Prof. Dr. Hanna (Balai Bahasa Provinsi Sulawesi Tenggara, Indonesia), Prof. Dr. Bambang Kaswanti Purwo (Atma Jaya Catholic University, Indonesia), Dr. Sugiyono (Language Center, Indonesia), Peter Suwarno, Ph.D (Arizona State University), and Herudjati Purwoko, Ph.D (Diponegoro University).

In terms of the topic areas, there are 33 papers on language maintenance, 24 papers on language learning, 19 paper on sociolinguistics, 15 paper on pragmatics, 8 papers on discourse analysis, 8 paper on morphology, 2 papers on syntax, 2 papers on translation, 1 papers on psycholinguistics, 1 papers on phonology, and 1 papers on semantics.

MAINTAINING INDIGENOUS LANGUAGE THROUGH UNDERSTANDING THE PHILOSOPHY AND CULTURE

(The Problem in maintaining 'Fukien (Hokkien)' and 'Hakka' dialects as indigenous language among Overseas Chinese Society in Medan, North Sumatera)

Abstract

Overseas Chinese, as the third biggest tribe in Indonesia, and one of the big minority groups in other South East Asia countries, speak in various dialects in their daily life. Those dialects are their indigenous languages, based on their ancestors'. Most of them speak in Fukien (Hokkien) or Hakka dialects. Some of them even can speak in the both dialects. They prefer speak in those dialects to speak in Mandarin. The Chinese cultural value and philosophy which are taught by the parents and learned by the children continuously in the family take part in maintaining the indigenous language. Overseas Chinese are still using the language among their family and peer group who have the same cultural backgrounds. This paper will discuss in detail how and what efforts have been done by Overseas Chinese 'Fukien' and 'Hakka' society in Medan, in order to maintain their dialects, which strongly related and influenced by the Chinese philosophy and culture.

Background

Overseas Chinese in Indonesia, comes from several tribes in China. There are Hokkien (Fukien), Hakka, Teochiu, Canton, and also some minority groups. Every tribe and minority group has its own language. Most of overseas Chinese in Indonesia are Hokkien and Hakka. Due to that issue, Hokkien and Hakka dialects are the most Chinese spoken dialects in Indonesia.

The most largest population of Hokkien and Hakka are in Medan. As the third biggest cities in Indonesia and the capital of North Sumatera province, Medan has great population of overseas Chinese, compare to other areas/cities in Indonesia. A highly visible component of Medan's population is the large number of overseas Chinese, unlike the overseas Chinese in other areas/cities in Indonesia, they continue to speak Hokkien and Hakka.

This phenomenon is rare for societies in Indonesia, who are mostly speak Indonesian language, although they are Chinese. Hokkien and Hakka dialects are continuously spoken by overseas Chinese from generation to generation, without contaminated by Indonesia language.

Maintaining to speak in Chinese dialects by the 20 percent Chinese population in Medan, is the influence of Chinese philosophy and culture, which rooted deeply in the people minds. The children are taught how to maintain well the cultures, the behaviors, the attitudes, the way of thinking and the communication in their own dialects. These issues are taught continuously through generations in the family.

Confucianism is the most well-known philosophy being implemented widely among Chinese family. The moral teaching and way of life which are taught in Confucianism, have been implemented well from the parents to the children. Communication in their Chinese dialects, Hokkien and Hakka has been spoken since they immigrated to Indonesia, and settled in Medan.

As the first group of Overseas Chinese to settle in large numbers, Hokkien community became the dominant immigrant group. Descendants of Hokkien people are the dominant group in Medan. Beside Hokkien, Hakka community is the second largest group in Medan, who emigrated out from their home region in China, in several waves from 1850 to 1930 (Passchier:2000).

As the biggest Overseas Chinese group in Medan, Hokkiens have influence their dialect to other smaller Overseas Chinese groups in Medan. As the result, Hokkien dialect can be spoken by all Chinese in Medan.

The Chinese Philosophy : Confucianism

Confucianism is Chinese ethical and philosophical system developed from the teaching of the Chinese philosopher, Confucius. It influenced the mind and the life of Chinese wherever they are. Its impacts are tightly can be seen in the Chinese cultures and values of Chinese descendents (Rainey:2010).

The core of Confucianism is humanism, the belief that human beings are teachable, improvable and perfectible through self- cultivation and self- creation (Lai:2008). Confucianism focuses on the cultivation of virtue and maintenance of ethics, the most basic of which are ren, yi, and li. Ren is an obligation of altruism and humaneness for other individuals within a community, yi is the upholding of righteousness and the moral disposition to do good, and li is a system of norms and propriety that determines how a person should properly act within a community (Rainey:2010).

Except ren, yi, and li, there is another core in Confucianism, called xiao (filial piety), which is considered among the greatest of virtues and must be shown in the certain relationships. The term 'filial' (meaning 'of a child') characterizes the respect that a child, originally a son, should show to his parents. This relationship was extended by analogy to a series of five relationships. The five bonds are the relationship between ruler to ruled, father to son, husband to wife, elder brother to younger brother, and friend to friend.

Relationships are central to Confucianism. Particular duties arise from one's particular situation in relation to others. The individual stands simultaneously in several different relationships with different people, including the relationship between parents and children. The juniors are considered in Confucianism to owe their senior reverence, seniors also have duties of benevolence and concern toward juniors. This kind of mutuality relationship is prevalent in Chinese society even to this day.

The relationship and the obligation of each individual in the relationship based on the teaching of Confucianism have brought the ideas to obey strictly to the rules, and agreements in the society, including in the family. The obligation of altruism in obeying and running those have been decided and organized well through generations, should be agreed and implemented without any excuse.

The goal of the obedience attitudes among individual in society is social harmony, which is also the great goal of Confucianism. Therefore it results in part from every individual knowing his or her place in the social order, and playing his or her part well in society. It has been arranged well and become fixed pattern in the society. Once someone acts against the agreement in the society, he or she will be claimed as traitor toward his/her family or group.

Maintaining Hokkien and Hakka Dialects through Understanding Confucianism.

As Hokkien and Hakka dialects are spoken among family's members through generations, it has been a must for every member in the family to communicate to each other in those dialects (Passchier:1997). The obligation of altruism in everyone's mind has trained him/her to obey to the family and what have been run whole these times. Since the dialects have been spoken from the parents to them, as children, they can't refuse to speak in those dialects continuously. As time goes by, it has become the habit which runs daily, in their life.

Filial piety (xiao) as one of the core in Confucianism, plays its roles in order to make the agreement and obligations run smoothly. Every member in family should act based on their position in family. The mind and the feeling should be integrated and the result can be seen through the attitudes toward other family's members (Lew:1998).

The other core in Confucianism, ren (humanity), as the sense of human life (the feeling of humanity towards others and self-esteem for oneself), brings the pride to be a Hokkien or Hakka is also made them proud of themselves. It's an honor for them to be part of the group's members. The ability in speaking the related dialect shows the identity of the speaker. Every member tries hard to learn his/her group's dialect, in order to be accepted in the group. Without the ability to speak the dialect, somehow he/she feels that the society doesn't want to admit and accept him/her sincerely. If they can't speak in the same dialect, they will be treated as strangers or outsiders. Of course, no one wants to be rejected. That's why it is important to be able to speak in their owned group's dialect (Yao:2000)

The next principle in Confucianism teaching is li. Li can be defined as concrete guide to human relationships or rules of proper action that genuinely embody the humanity and general principle of social order or the general ordering of life. Through this principle, Confucius emphasized the fact that people need a well ordered society for wen to be expressed. It also emphasized the way things should be done or propriety, positive rather than negative. The main components of propriety emphasize the openness of people to each other (Rainey: 2010).

This principle influence the way people act to each other. Speaking in the same dialect make everyone feel comfortable. Each person feels the sense of belongingness while they talk to each other; just like they belong to same family. They feel the boundaries and close relationship among them while they speak in the same dialect. Those feelings give them strength to continue speak in the dialect wherever they are and whenever they speak.

The final principle discussed in this paper is yi. Yi means righteousness; the moral disposition to do good. It covers the ability to recognize what is right and good. It also includes the ability to feel, under the circumstances what are the right things to do. It can be considered as the intuition that guide to the right direction that should be done (Rainey:2010).

Speaking in the same dialect make the speakers feel they can understand each other very well. Somehow, they even know and understand their speaking partners mind and feeling. Without have to say it out, the members have intuitions that guide them to understand each other among them. They understand which thing is allowed to do, and which thing is forbidden (Yao:2000).

These are the core in Confucianism which cause the Hokkien and Hakka dialects are maintained well till today.

Conclusion

The core teaching of Confucianism brings lots of influences in maintaining well the Hokkien and Hakka dialects in Medan. The Overseas Chinese think, behave, and act based on what have been taught by Confucius. Through understanding the principles of Confucianism, members in group make and keep the good relationship among them. The relationship is supported by their abilities and their intentions to communicate with each others in same dialect.

Hokkien and Hakka as the first and second biggest Overseas Chinese groups in Medan have proved their loyalty and consistency to maintain their dialects well. The dialects have been spoken through generations.

Finally, it is concluded that by understanding the Confucianism, Hokkien and Hakka speakers are led to maintain the dialects.
